TEMPLESTOWE - LOCAL OVERVIEW

Source: REIV QTR Median House Pricing Report June 2012

Like a number of premium suburbs across Melbourne's east, Templestowe has seen a high degree of fluctuation in median pricing since the growth of 2009. Median house price is seen as an important indicator of pricing trends by the market and Templestowe has seen a high consistency in the last twelve months which, we believe, accurately shows the activity in your suburb. By reviewing trends for the last five years and the recent activity, we expect the trend to remain steady despite a drop last quarter. With spring upon us we anticipate the influx of buyers into the market to stimulate more activity in the upper end of Templestowe property, which will help drive median price.

MARKET UPDATE

Traditionally we see a large number of properties enter the market in spring with a sizeable jump of over 15% from those coming on the market in the winter months. The reasons why individual home owners think spring is the prime selling time are many and varied. We believe it comes down to a combination of both market and emotional factors. The concept of more buyers being in the market, creating increased interest in a newly listed home, is a great attraction to those placing their home for sale. This certainly stands true and as more property enters the market, so too do potential buyers as people look at trading up into a larger home or conversely choosing to downsize.

The other influence is the emotionality of people. We often hear that with spring and better weather people become more inclined to get out and about and with that, it instils the thought of looking at improving their housing options. Buying a home is a very personal choice and for some it may be the hardest decision they will make. Having a property presented that creates the most emotional appeal to potential buyers is critical. This is why spring is a key time with gardens being a major attraction. Following a wet winter and some soaked gardens, those listing their property for the spring period are hoping for some sunshine soon to present their home at its best.

This winter we have seen lower stock levels compared to previous years however, with a shift in weather and with some great properties entering the market we see spring as a good period for both buyers and sellers. Auction clearance rates have remained stable for the last six months with good signs of improvement in July, which points to an underlying confidence in the market. With signs of a stable economic environment and consumer sentiment improving, we anticipate this being reflected in the property market. We are certainly seeing the numbers of people attending house opens increase and interested purchasers more buoyant, which bodes well for a good spring and the opportunity for people to explore their housing dreams.

FINANCE NEWS

So what does the economic environment hold for the coming months? Too often we hear through the media the negative issues with our economic environment and the doomsayers predicting our property market is at risk, but there exists a more positive view of the property landscape. The Housing Industry Association recently stated, "the fundamentals of Australia's housing market remain very strong – rents continue to grow at a rate well above headline inflation, rental vacancy rates are tight, and Australia's unemployment rate remains the envy of the developed world". This great news for investors is mirrored for residential home owners.

Despite positive news on the economy, it appears that the growing economic confidence seen in July has abated, evidenced in Westpac's Consumer Sentiment Index which seems to be driven by uncertainty surrounding the introduction of the carbon tax. This Index measures people's perceptions on our future economy, with more cautious support for economic conditions over the next twelve months and the longer term of five years. Spending in both the retail and property sectors traditionally follows a positive trend in consumer confidence and, with a softening of consumer confidence, spending may need to be influenced through lower interest rates.

The Reserve Bank of Australia's decision to leave the cash rate unchanged in August does show that the economy is performing well within its expectations. The prudence in this decision was supported by increases in retail trade and building approvals for the May period, further bolstering recent economic stability. The RBA has indicated that they are relatively happy with the economy but continue to monitor the impact of the high Australian dollar - specifically, its impact on exports (in particular manufacturing) and the state of the Euro zone.

Recent improved retail spending commonly flows into spending on property. Key economists project that Melbourne's property market is to remain at a stable level for the next two years, presenting a market in which both buyers and sellers can benefit. Only marginal changes in Melbourne's median pricing over the last twelve months have occurred; a trend expected to continue. Now is good time to trade into a new home or invest.
